

An Important Message from
The Texas Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC)

Revalidation Due Date Extensions Beginning June 16, 2026

Background:

This MCO Notice informs MCOs of an update to the provider revalidation due date extension process.

Key Details:

Any provider who has not previously received a revalidation extension and has a due date on or before June 15, 2026, is eligible for a first-time revalidation extension of 180 days. Please be aware that the 180-day extension will no longer be valid after June 16, 2026.

Beginning June 16, 2026, the providers revalidation due date will be extended by 60 calendar days only if they meet the following extension criteria:

- The providers current revalidation due date is on or after June 16, 2026.
- The providers revalidation application was submitted before their revalidation due date, and it is now an in-flight application.

If the 60-day extension has lapsed and the in-flight revalidation application remains in review status, the provider will continue to receive 60-day extensions. However, providers have 165 cumulative business days to rectify all deficiencies in their revalidation application. Should a provider's revalidation application have outstanding deficiencies exceeding the total number of calendar days permitted, the revalidation application will be closed, and the provider must submit a reenrollment request.

Note: "In-flight" applications refer to revalidation applications that providers have submitted through the Provider Enrollment and Management System (PEMS) but that have not yet been approved. This does not include applications that are in "Draft" status.

Providers who do not submit their revalidation application by their due date will be disenrolled and PDC 66 will be recorded on their enrollment record. Should a provider file a complaint within 60 days of disenrollment, HHSC will grant one 60-day extension to allow the provider time to submit their application for further extensions. If the provider does not submit within this 60-day period, they will be disenrolled and will be required to submit a reenrollment application.

Length of Extension	Requirements
180 calendar days	· Provider has not received a first extension · Revalidation due date on or before June 15, 2026
60 calendar days	· In-flight revalidation application · Revalidation due date on or after June 16, 2026
